The End Brain Cancer Initiative Shares PCNSL Patient Friendly Resource About ONO PHARMA Phase II PROSPECT Study Results

EBCI helps PCNSL patients understand the results from ONO PHARMA's recent phase II PROSPECT study, which tested the safety and efficacy of tirabrutinib.

REDMOND, WA, UNITED STATES, December 23, 2025 / EINPresswire.com/ -- ONO PHARMA recently announced positive results from the phase II PROSPECT study, which tested the safety and efficacy of tirabrutinib is in U.S. patients with relapsed (came back after treatment) or refractory (didn't respond to treatment) Primary Central Nervous System Lymphoma (PCNSL). The End Brain Cancer Initiative (EBCI) has created a patient friendly resource for PCNSL patients, caregivers, and family members to easily understand these results, which can be found at https://endbraincancer.org/ono-pharma/.

Tirabrutinib is an oral (taken by mouth) targeted therapy. It works by blocking a protein called BTK (Bruton's tyrosine kinase), which plays a role in cancer cell growth. While it's already approved for PCNSL in Japan, Taiwan, and South Korea, it is still being studied in the U.S.

Tirabrutinib may offer a new treatment option for patients with relapsed or refractory PCNSL. It showed promising results in shrinking tumors and had a manageable safety profile. EBCI anticipates a global confirmatory trial related to tirabrutinib's benefit in the future. People who would like more information about this study or other treatment options should contact EBCI's Clinical Research Coordinator and Patient Navigator, Shreya Prakash, at Shreya@EndBrainCancer.org or at 425-436-8688.
